Applicant's arguments filed 12/2/2004 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. The written description rejection remains for the reasons of record. Applicant claims the isolation of ubiquitous spore-like cells which are pluripotent but the evidence of record is insufficient to show that applicant did, in fact, possess such an invention at the time the invention was made. Applicant claims the isolation of a cell type which is not a stem of any known variety, not differentiated at all and is also able to differentiate into essentially any cell type under the right conditions- the examples and evidence don't seem to support that applicant possessed a method of isolating cells with alleged properties.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 1-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention.

Applicant's specification lacks an adequate written description for the method of isolating the cells instantly claimed. The claimed cells are described only by a characteristic, i.e. being spore-like, without any known or disclosed correlation between that characteristic and the physical, chemical or biological nature of the cell, i.e. origin, cell-type, cell function, etc. Applicant's claimed characteristic is not a sufficient identifying characteristic for written description purposes, even when accompanied by a method of obtaining the claimed cells. Further, it is unclear that there is a repeatable method for producing the spore-like cells because there is no adequate characterization of the cells. Applicant alleges that the cells are pluripotent however it is unclear that the "spore-like" cells disclosed have this phenotype.

Applicant has isolated some "spore-like" cells but the claims are generically drawn to isolating any and all "spore-like" cells (applicant theorizing that the cells are found throughout diverse animals and tissues). A generic statement . . . without more, is not an adequate written description of the genus because it does not distinguish the claimed genus from others, except by function." See University of California v. Eli Lilly and co. 119 F.3d 1559, 43 USPQ2d 1398 (1997).

To satisfy the written description requirement, a patent specification must describe the claimed invention in sufficient detail that one skilled in the art can reasonably conclude that the inventor had possession of the claimed invention. See, e.g., Vas-Cath, Inc. v. Mahurkar, 935 F.2d at 1563, 19 USPQ2d at 1116. >However, a showing of possession alone does not cure the lack of a written description. Enzo Biochem, Inc. v.

Gen-Probe, Inc., 296 F.3d 1316, 1330, 63 USPQ2d 1609, 1617 (Fed. Cir. 2002). Applicant is claiming the isolation of a new, distinct cell type (or form) however it is unclear that applicant has in fact isolated a new type of cells because the description is inadequate for comparison with the art.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
